The Muzerije is an art house offering the residents of Den Bosch courses on art and theatre. By adding a glass roof the courtyard of this historical monument was transformed into a central space where people can meet each other and where performances and exhibitions can take place. Together with the elliptical zinc-clad building volume, the roof light and the glass elevators are a new addition to the old building.

With this addition the internal circulation has been greatly improved. All adjacent spaces are directly accessible from the central atrium. The roof lights rest on the historical brick walls and on the other side it perfectly fits onto the zinc building volume. Octatube has currently gained a lot of experience with designing and building glass atriums for historical buildings. The Muzerije fits in this series.
